PHP session stop working after a while The problem is in this piece of code. the session variable (score) is not being updated after a while. This should be a simple update_score function, but I see no reason it would stop updating the data. Can anyone explain this? function update_score(){ $score = $_SESSION['score']; $score = $_POST['score']; $this->mysqli->query("UPDATE users SET score = '$score' WHERE id = '".$_SESSION[id]"); } A: UPDATIONS are not allowed to change global variables. Having said that, you CAN make it work like that: function update_score(){ $score = $_SESSION['score']; if(isset($_POST['score'])) { $_SESSION['score'] = $_POST['score']; } else { $_SESSION['score'] = $score; } $this->mysqli->query("UPDATE users SET score = '$score' WHERE id = '".$_SESSION[id]"); } And if it is using global variables, it should be a reason for performance decrease in larger apps as updates occur more often. PS this approach works also in cases when variables in $_SESSION are not properly managed and not cleaned at any time, so this is an abstraction you'd need to be aware of. Linda McQuaig is a Canadian author, syndicated columnist, and former politician from the city of Ottawa, Ontario. McQuaig has been a commentator on politics, especially economic and political issues, for almost three decades. In the 1970s, she was a research assistant to former Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. At the centre of her writings are a strong defence of the need for political and economic reform to meet the needs of the middle class, and a critique of Canada's economic and political system. She is a founding and

Playing Track and Field Last Second: Ben Arthur By Ben Arthur from Westchester High School in the San Antonio area, Texas, knew the storm was coming. A few days earlier he'd watched a storm move in off the ocean, clouds rolling in from the west, a sign of days — maybe weeks — of rain in the forecast. This morning when the school let out, Ben knew he'd have to leave to avoid standing in a puddle, but he had no idea how much rain he could expect. When the rain began to fall just a couple of miles from school, he and his mom took refuge in a shopping center, where she bought bananas and a bag of apples. It was an emotional morning for the mother of three, but she was determined not to let her temper get the best of her. Her son, however, was having none of it. "He's too much of a little boy and he was mad and was saying things like, 'You know I like to hit you, Mommy. I hope you get hit,' " she says. "I said, 'I know you do and I appreciate it, and I love you, but you have to be calm and you can't hit me.' " "No, it wasn't a hit," she continues. "Just like a tap on the arm. He did end up hitting me in the head and my elbow." It was a difficult day, but a strange one. Most parents would be grateful for a quick shower and some food, but these parents were thankful for what they'd spent the previous day doing. The mother had taken her son to a NASCAR race. "We took a long time, and then went around to Wal-Mart and bought everything we needed," she says. "And then we took a very scenic drive to Wal-
